Failed Push to Oust Rumsfeld

Woodward book: Card led charge for defense chief's removal

After President Bush won re-election in 2004, White House Chief of Staff Andrew H. Card Jr., got out an 8½-by-11-inch spiral notebook, half an inch thick. He called it his "hit-by-the-bus" book — handy in case someone in the administration suddenly had to be replaced. The biggest question mark was Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld. Should he stay?

The champions of change at the Defense Department included Condoleezza Rice, the national security adviser who would soon be nominated to become the new secretary of state; her replacement as national security adviser, Stephen J. Hadley; and in the right circumstances, Card himself.

Card thought the best replacement for Rumsfeld would be James A. Baker III, the former Reagan White House chief of staff and secretary of state to the president's father.

The president seemed intrigued.

Card kept pushing, at one point raising the issue with Vice President Cheney, who virtually insisted Rumsfeld stay. In mid-December, 2004, the president made his decision. Rumsfeld would stay.

After Thanksgiving 2005, Card made another concentrated effort to get the president to replace Rumsfeld. Many Republican and Democratic leaders were telling Card privately that they just could not deal with the secretary of defense. But the president would not even authorize Card to send out feelers or to enter into any discussion with Baker. BOB WOODWARD (THE WASHINGTON POST)

BOXES

It's an Open-And-Shut Case

A Greensburg, Pa., man accused of theft arrived for a preliminary hearing wearing a cardboard box on his head to conceal his identity. Justin Michael Kalich wore the box at the suggestion of his lawyer while he waited outside a judge's office Thursday. "I'm trying to think outside of the box, so to speak," attorney Jeff Leonard said. Leonard said the move was prompted by concerns about whether a witness would be able to identify his client in connection with a July theft of reel wire. The witness might see a photo lineup before his client goes into the courtroom, he said. (AP)

In Other News, Dry Cleaners Are Nosy

Dry cleaners find all kinds of things hiding in the clothes of their customers — but probably nothing quite like what some employees in Ann Arbor, Mich., stumbled across recently. A note found in a customer's clothing read, "You have committed a murder, but no one believes it. All I can do is kill myself, then everyone will see what you have done." It was signed: "Your wife, Alice."

Employees called police, fearing the note described a murder-suicide plot. But it turns out the owner of the sport coat is an actor involved in a play. The note was a prop, police said. (AP)

Washington has a plethora of unusual sports that various clubs can sign up to compete in — dodgeball, kickball, bocce. Now, it's time someone finds a human-tower-constructing league, much like this competition in Tarragona, Spain, on Sunday. It takes some 250 people to form a tower such as this one being taken down by the La Colla Vella de Xiquets de Valls team during the contest. The majority of the participants form the base.

It said the flight was diverted after a passenger notified the crew he had brought a hamster aboard and had lost track of it. (AP)

Hastert Calls for Foley Investigation

Speaker seeks criminal probe of former rep.'s conduct with pages

WASHINGTON | House Speaker Dennis Hastert requested Sunday that the Justice Department conduct an investigation into former Rep. Mark Foley's electronic messages to teenage boys — a lurid scandal that has put House Republicans in political peril.

"As Speaker of the House, I hereby request that the Department of Justice conduct an investigation of Mr. Foley's conduct with current and former House pages to determine to what extent any of his actions violated federal law," Hastert, R-Ill., wrote in a letter to Attorney General Alberto Gonzales.

The White House and Democratic leaders in Congress also called Sunday for a criminal probe. White House counselor Dan Bartlett called the allegations against Foley shocking, but said President Bush hadn't learned of Foley's inappropriate e-mails to a 16-year-old boy and instant messages to other boys before the news broke last week.

"There is going to be, I'm sure, a criminal investigation into the particulars of this case," Bartlett said.

Foley, R-Fla., quit Congress on Friday after the disclosure of the e-mails he sent to a former congressional page and sexually suggestive instant messages he sent to other high school pages.

Senate Democratic Leader Harry

Foley

Reid of Nevada called the Foley case "repugnant, but equally as bad is the possibility that Republican leaders in the House of Representatives knew there was a problem and ignored it to preserve a congressional seat this election year."

Reid said the case should be handled outside Congress.

"Under laws that Congressman

Foley helped write, soliciting sex from a minor online is a federal crime," Reid said.

In his letter to Gonzales on Sunday, Hastert asked the Justice Department to investigate "who had specific knowledge of the content of any sexually explicit communications between Mr. Foley and any former or current House pages and what actions such individuals took, if any, to provide them to law enforcement."

Hastert maintained at first that he had learned only last week about the e-mails. But Republican Rep. Thomas Reynolds said Saturday he had told Hastert months ago about the messages. JOHN HEILPERIN (AP)

Teen Prodigy Killed in Road Accident

BOCA RATON, FLA. | A teen engineering prodigy who gained national attention in 2002 when he and his family received identification chip implants on live television was killed in a motorcycle accident, authorities said.

Derek Jacobs, 18, lost control of his motorcycle early Saturday and crashed into a guardrail and a pole, the Palm Beach County sheriff's office said.

Derek was set to get his engineering degree this year after only two years at Florida International University. He wanted to be a neurosurgeon, his mother said.

At age 12, Derek became certified by Microsoft as a systems engineer. He was qualified to run corporate computer networks.

Two years later, he and his family had identity chips implanted on live television. (AP)

Rumsfeld: I Won't Resign

Defense secretary says he has Bush's support despite recent criticism

WASHINGTON | Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, coming under renewed fire for his management of the Iraq war, said Sunday he is not considering resigning and said the president had called him personally in recent days to express his continued support.

Speaking to reporters en route to Nicaragua for a meeting of defense ministers, Rumsfeld said he was not surprised by reports in a new book that White House staff had encouraged President Bush to fire him after the 2004 election.

"It's the task of the chief of staff of the White House — and having been one, I know that — to raise all kinds of questions with the president and think through different ways of approaching things," Rumsfeld said.

When asked by reporters if he had recently considered resigning, Rumsfeld said, "No."

In the new book "State of Denial," Washington Post assistant managing editor Bob Woodward writes that former White House chief of staff

Rumsfeld

Andrew Card twice sought to persuade Bush to fire Rumsfeld.

Card on Friday did not dispute that he had talked about a Rumsfeld resignation with the president but said it was his job to discuss a wide range of possible replacements, including his own.

He said he had spoken to Bush since the book's contents were made public. Bush "called me personally," said Rumsfeld, to voice support.

The defense secretary and Bush have faced growing criticism for their handling of the Iraq war as violence there has escalated, U.S. casualties have mounted and public support for the conflict has declined.

Possible Mob, Al-Qaeda Ties Worry the FBI

WASHINGTON | The FBI's top counterterrorism official harbors lots of concerns: weapons of mass destruction, undetected homegrown terrorists and the possibility that old-fashioned mobsters will team up with al-Qaeda for the right price.

Though there is no direct evidence yet of organized crime collaborating with terrorists, the first hints of a connection surfaced in a recent undercover FBI operation. Agents stopped a man with alleged mob ties from selling missiles to an informant posing as a terrorist middleman.

That case and other factors are heightening concerns about a real-life episode of "The Sopranos" teaming with Osama bin Laden's followers.

The new strategy involves an analysis of nationwide criminal investigations, particularly white-collar crime, side by side with intelligence and terrorist activity. (AP)

Poll: Top Senate Races Are Very Competitive

Democratic candidates gain on incumbents in three pivotal states

WASHINGTON | Democratic Rep. Harold Ford is running even with Republican Bob Corker in Tennessee, while Democrat Jon Tester has edged ahead of Republican Sen. Conrad Burns in Montana, according to polls released Sunday for some of the most contested Senate races.

The findings suggest an intensely competitive campaign for Congress heading into the Nov. 7 elections.

Republican Sen. Mike DeWine is in a virtual tie with Democratic Rep. Sherrod Brown in Ohio. Brown leads DeWine 45 percent to 43 percent in a poll released last week.

The three races are three that Democrats need to win if they are to take control of the Senate.

The Mason-Dixon polls done for various media outlets found: Ford had the backing of 43 percent in Tennessee, while former Chattanooga, Tenn., Mayor Corker was backed by 42 percent. Corker had a lead in midsummer polling matching the two. Tester has pulled ahead of Burns in Montana, 47 percent to 40 percent. They were tied in August polling. (AP)

Safety at Schools Again Scrutinized

'No perfect security' to protect students in wake of shootings

DENVER | A bearded drifter walks into a Colorado school and fatally shoots a student before taking his own life. Wisconsin authorities charge three boys with plotting a bomb attack on their high school and, two weeks later, a student in a rural school allegedly shoots his principal. A gunman bursts into a Vermont elementary school looking for his ex-girlfriend and guns down a teacher. All of this in the past month alone.

Since the 1999 Columbine massacre that left 15 people dead, there has been a determined effort to improve school safety. Law enforcement officers across the nation and around the world have added training specifically intended to address school violence. But experts say there is simply no way to guarantee that a stranger or student won't be able to injure or kill on school grounds.

"There's no perfect security, from the White House to the schoolhouse," said Kenneth Trump, president of the National School Safety and Security Services.

Since Columbine, school officials have gotten better at preventing student violence, he said, but authorities can't prepare for every problem.

Palestinian Factions Clash in Gaza

Anti-government protests trigger fierce street battles, killing 8

GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP | Hamas militiamen's efforts to break up anti-government protests Sunday sparked running street battles across the Gaza Strip that killed eight people in the worst internal Palestinian violence since Hamas took power.

Militants from the opposition Fatah group retaliated by torching the Palestinian Cabinet building in Ramallah, attacking Hamas offices throughout the West Bank, kidnapping a Hamas official and threatening a mass strike. The spasm of violence dampened already fading hopes for the creation of a national unity government between the two groups that could end crippling economic sanctions.

"This is forbidden in Islam, we are in the holy month of Ramadan," said Majed Badawi, 33, who managed to escape uninjured after his car was caught in the crossfire.

Late Sunday, Interior Minister Said Siyam ordered the Hamas militia off the streets, ministry spokesman Khaled Abu Hilal said.

Violence between Fatah and Hamas loyalists plagued Gaza throughout the spring, but largely disappeared when Israel launched a widescale offensive here in late June after Hamas-linked militants captured an Israeli soldier.

Palestinian Prime Minister Ismail Haniyeh, of Hamas, urged Palestinians to end the internal violence. Haniyeh also defended the Hamas militiamen, saying they acted lawfully in trying to break up the protests.

President Mahmoud Abbas, of Fatah, ordered an investigation into the fighting.

"These confrontations have crossed the red line, which we have avoided crossing for four decades," he said in a speech broadcast on Palestine TV. IBRAHIM BARZAK (AP)

Election workers count votes at a polling station in Sarajevo, Bosnia, on Sunday.

Divided Bosnia Votes in Key Poll

Initial vote tallies reveal differing views on how to run country

SARAJEVO, BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA | Bosnians appeared split in key elections on the country's future Sunday, with Muslims and Catholic Croats voting for politicians who want to unify the Balkan nation, but Serbs backing a candidate who advocates ethnic division, early results showed.

With up to 50 percent of the vote counted, election officials said it appeared that Nebojsa Radmanovic — whose party chief recently proposed a referendum that would allow Serb territories to secede — will represent Orthodox Christian Serbs in Bosnia's three-member presidency.

Officials said his counterparts looked likely to be strong advocates of a united Bosnia: Haris Silajdzic, who won election to the Muslim Bosniak seat, and Ivo Miro Jovic, who was leading a tight race for re-election as the Croat representative. Further results were to be announced Monday.

Sunday's elections were the battle-scarred country's attempt to decide who should lead Bosnia as it tries to free itself from the ethnic divisions that remain from its 1992-95 war and move toward possible European Union membership. Since the end of the war, important decisions have been made by an international administrator.

Muslim Bosniaks generally back a united country, as do their Roman Catholic Croat allies. But many Serbs still cling to beliefs that sparked the war — namely, that their half of the country can secede and become independent.

Iraqi Politicians Lob Accusations

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Shiite politicians demanded changes in the Iraqi government Sunday, accusing a Sunni Arab party in the coalition of ties to terrorism after a bodyguard of its leader was arrested on suspicion of planning bomb attacks.

After the bodyguard's arrest, an unprecedented surprise curfew was imposed on Baghdad on Saturday, preventing pedestrians as well as vehicle traffic. The curfew was lifted early Sunday.

At least 23 people were killed in violence Sunday, and 21 bodies were found in Baghdad or to the south, many of them bound and tortured. (AP)

New Tape of 9/11 Hijackers Emerges

Video taken in 2000 in Afghanistan also has bin Laden footage

LONDON | More than 18 months before they carried out the worst terrorist attack on U.S. soil, a new videotape shows two of the Sept. 11 hijackers laughing and smiling for a camera.

Mohamed Atta and Ziad Jarrah look much different in the tape than they do in photographs made famous after the attacks in New York and Washington.

Both seem younger, are bearded, and the infamously bleak gaze of Atta, the ringleader, is replaced by a somewhat softer expression. Osama bin Laden also appears on the tape, speaking to a large group of people in January 2000.

EARLY VIEW: Ziad Jarrah, left, piloted United Flight 93, which crashed in a field, and Mohamed Atta flew one of the planes that brought down the World Trade Center.

The Sunday Times, which originally reported on the video and posted it on its Web site, said the footage was taken in Afghanistan and was meant to be released after the men's deaths.

The soundless video appears to be a departure from previous releases by al-Qaeda, which is "normally, very professional in their media," said Paul Beaver, an independent defense and security expert.

The Sunday Times said it had obtained the video "through a previously tested channel" but gave no further details. It said sources from al-Qaeda and the United States had confirmed the video's authenticity on condition of anonymity.

The video also includes images of a man who appears to be bin Laden speaking to an audience outdoors. A time stamp indicated that footage was shot on Jan. 8, 2000, and the Sunday Times said it appeared to have been made at Tarnak Farm, once the base for bin Laden's family in the Afghan desert near Kandahar's airport. Dozens Feared Dead in Nigeria Dam Collapse

KANO, NIGERIA | Families were swept away in a torrent of water and up to 40 people were feared dead after a dam collapsed in north-west Nigeria, a state-owned radio station said Sunday.

The dam — about one mile from the center of Zamfara state's capital city of Gusau — collapsed Saturday after heavy rains. But surveyors were trying to determine whether to blame the downpour or structural neglect.

Radio Nigeria said up to 40 people might be dead. Police confirmed three deaths.

About 1,500 homes were destroyed in the deluge, said Ibrahim Farinloye, spokesman for the government agency organizing the relief effort. (AP)

Region's Air Still Bad, but Improving

Number of dangerous smog days drops since 2003, new data show

WASHINGTON | The region hasn't yet met federal standards for healthy air, but the number of dangerously smoggy days in the region has significantly declined since 2003, the latest data show.

The Metropolitan Washington

Council of Governments said that from 2003 to late September 2006, the area had counted 63 days in which the levels of ground-level ozone — a harmful gas formed when the sun heats polluted air — merited Code Orange, Code Red or Code Purple warnings.

Between 1999 and 2002, the region had 114 of those days, said the organization, which is comprised of about 20 local governments plus state and federal representatives.

"The air's cleaner," said City Council member Phil Mendelson, chairman of COG's air quality committee. "But not clean enough."

The area has exceeded smog limits repeatedly since 1977, and it hasn't been able to make the improvements necessary to meet federal smog standards. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will begin enforcing those standards in 2009, and violations could lead to a loss of federal transportation funding.

Frank O'Donnell of Clean Air Watch noted that the Washington area still regularly suffers through Code Orange days and worse. "If we're still seeing eight or 10 dirty air days in the area, that, to me, is still a sign that we're not there yet," he said. (AP)

4 members of court attend service that precedes new term

WASHINGTON | Archbishop Donald Wuerl celebrated his first Red Mass as leader of the Washington Archdiocese today. The Mass, which precedes the opening of the U.S. Supreme Court's term, was attended by four of the five Roman Catholic members of the high court.

Chief Justice John Roberts and Justices Antonin Scalia, Anthony Kennedy and Clarence Thomas were among members of the congregation who attended the annual Mass at the Cathedral of Saint Matthew the Apostle. There were also three members of President Bush's cabinet there.

During the service, Wuerl told the crowd that morality and ethical considerations can't be divorced from religion, even when matters of public policy and the law are being considered. Wuerl said religious faith has long been a cornerstone of the American experience. (AP)

Officer in Suspect Shooting is Named

CAPITOL HEIGHTS, MD. | County police have identified the officer who was involved in the shooting of an 18-year-old suspect in the attempted theft of a go-cart. Cpl. Michael Kane is an eight-year veteran of the force.

Kane was among officers who were flagged down by a business owner in the 4900 block of Marlboro Pike on Friday. The man said two suspects were trying to steal a go-cart from his parking lot.

Police say Kane struggled with one of the suspects, who allegedly reached for a handgun that police said was in his waistband. The suspect was shot once in his hip.

Kane has been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of a police investigation.

County police have been involved in 15 shootings this year, four of them fatal. (AP)

Redskins Beat Jaguars in Overtime Thriller

36 | 30

68-yard touchdown pass from Brunell to Moss seals victory

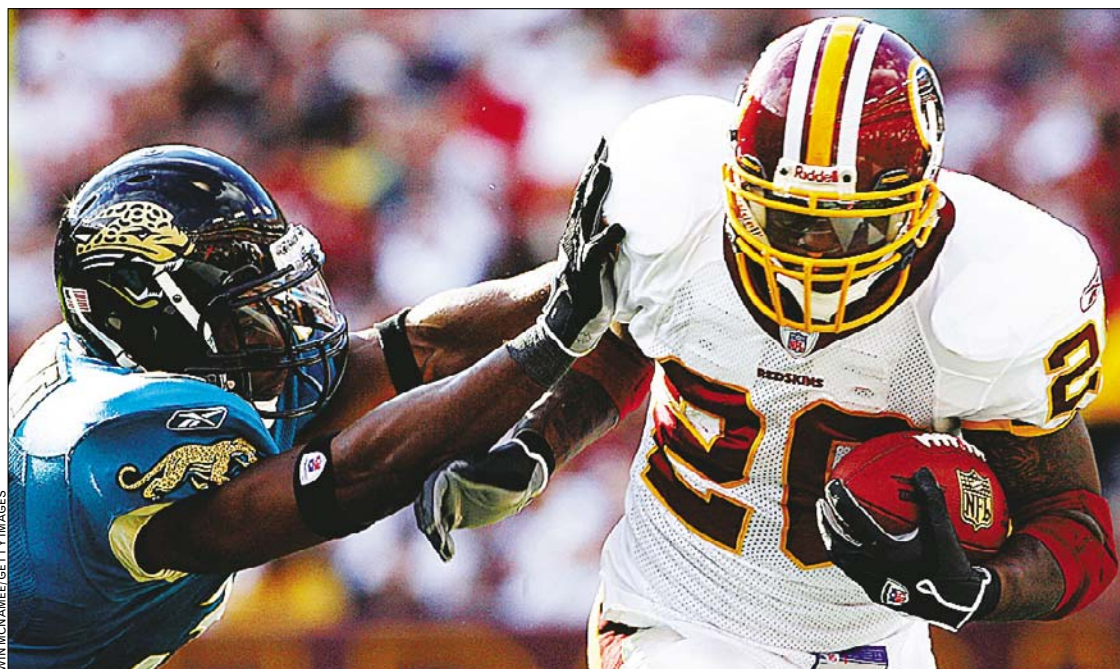

REDSKINS | No need for Mark Brunell to gloat about beating his old team. His favorite receiver, Santana Moss, and the rest of the Washington Redskins' offense did plenty to leave the Jacksonville Jaguars sufficiently embarrassed.

Moss leaped between two defenders to catch a 68-yard touchdown pass 1:49 into overtime Sunday, the third time he left would-be tacklers behind on the way to the end zone, giving the Redskins a 36-30 victory over the Jaguars.

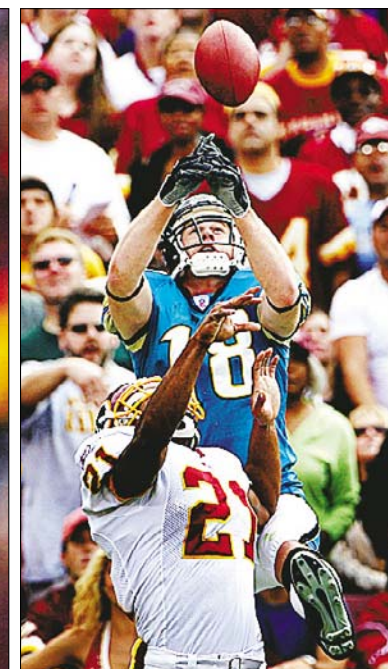

After blowing two fourth-quarter leads, the Redskins won the toss at the start of overtime and needed only three plays to score. Brunell found Moss near the sideline — the play had to be reviewed to make sure the receiver didn't step out of bounds — and Moss left Brian Williams and Deon Grant flat-footed as he snagged the ball on the run.

Brunell set an NFL single-game record with 22 consecutive completions last week against Houston, and he and the Redskins (2-2) were able to back up that performance with 481 yards of total offense against a much better defense. Brunell, who played nine seasons for the Jaguars before he was replaced by current Jacksonville quarterback Byron Leftwich at the end of the 2003 season, went 18-for-30 for 329 yards with three touchdowns and one interception.

Jacksonville's Josh Scobee tied the game with a 41-yard field goal with six seconds remaining in regulation, matching John Hall's 37-yarder with 1:55 to play. There were

Clinton Portis stiff-arms safety Deon Grant on his way to 112 yards and one touchdown on 27 carries, while Matt Jones out-leaps Sean Taylor for one of his two catches.

Grading GIBBS

- Best Call: With three minutes left in the third quarter, the Redskins had the ball inside the 5-yard line. Three straight runs by Clinton Portis put the team up for the first time. The Redskins worked Portis the whole game.
- Worst Call: Hindsight is 20/20. If the Redskins had been able to get the ball deep downfield, the flea flicker on the opening offensive drive would have been the best call. But an interception is a bad way to start against a good team.
- Best Adjustment: The Redskins finally started using their speedy wide receivers, and Santana Moss got into the game in a big way: four catches for 138 yards and three touchdowns.

A Washington beat a good Jacksonville team that is certainly thinking playoffs.

HIGH ROAD: Jacksonville wide receiver Reggie Williams goes airborne to score the first of his two touchdowns in the Jaguars' 36-30 overtime loss to the Redskins.

23 points scored in a fourth quarter in which the Jaguars overcame two deficits, including a 10-point hole with 6:40 remaining.

Leftwich, who starred locally at H.D. Woodson High School, completed 21 of 35 passes for 289 yards with three touchdowns and one interception.

But no one was more impressive than Moss, whose spin move left Grant sprawled on the grass at the 11-yard line on a 55-yard touchdown reception in the first quarter, his first score of the season. In the fourth quarter, Moss made Williams whiff near the goal line on an 8-yard TD.

Moss finished with four catches for 138 yards. Clinton Portis ran 27 times for 112 yards and scored Washington's other touchdown.

McNair leads team to comeback victory for second straight week

RAVENS | This time, a field goal wasn't going to be good enough. Steve McNair had to take the Baltimore Ravens into the end zone for a victory, and he had to cover 60 yards without any timeouts.

McNair brought the unbeaten Ravens back for the second week in a row, throwing a 10-yard pass to TE Todd Heap with 34 seconds left to defeat the San Diego Chargers 16-13 Sunday.

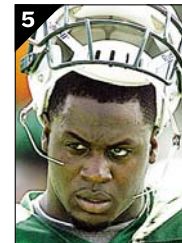

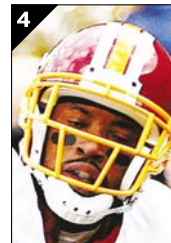

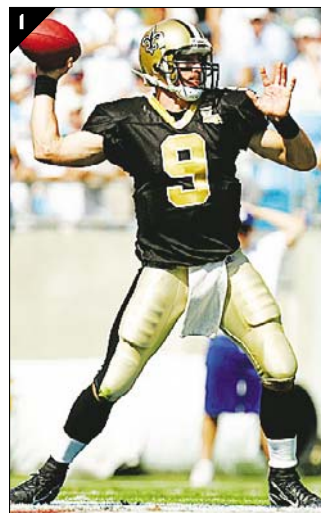

One week earlier, McNair engineered a late drive that produced a field goal and a 15-14 win over Cleveland. Showing precisely why they obtained him in an offseason trade, McNair went 4-for-5 for 43 yards and ran once for 12 yards during the final drive.

After a 17-yard pass to Mark

Clayton got the ball to the Chargers' 35, McNair ran to the 23 and completed a 13-yarder to Clayton.

On second down, McNair found Heap for the game-winner, leaving the Ravens 4-0 for the first time. (AP)

Clemens Denies Drug Accusations

Grimsley's allegations 'incredibly dangerous,' Astros pitcher says

BASEBALL | Roger Clemens, Andy Pettitte and Miguel Tejada were among the players that a former major league pitcher accused of using performance-enhancing drugs, according to a federal agent's affidavit, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The player reportedly making the accusations was Jason Grimsley, who used to play with Clemens and Pettitte on the New York Yankees and is now out of baseball.

Clemens and Pettitte, now teammates on the Houston Astros, denied the allegations Sunday. Baltimore teammates Brian Roberts, Jay Gibbons and Tejada also were implicated in the sworn statement, the Times said Saturday on its Web site and in Sunday editions.

"I just think it's incredibly dangerous to sit out there and just throw names out there," Clemens said Sunday before the Astros played in Atlanta.

"I've been tested plenty of times," he added. "Again, I just find it amazing that you can throw anybody out there."

According to a 20-page search

warrant affidavit signed by IRS Special Agent Jeff Novitzky, the Times reported, Grimsley identified other players who had used drugs.

According to the affidavit, the Times said, Grimsley told investigators Clemens and Pettitte "used athletic performance-enhancing drugs."

The affidavit also alleged Grimsley told federal agents that Roberts, Gibbons and Tejada "took anabolic steroids." (AP)

Woods Wins 6th Straight With Ease

GOLF | Tiger Woods didn't have to work for his sixth straight PGA Tour victory. He just had to wait.

Woods matched his longest PGA Tour winning streak Sunday at the American Express Championship, where he was slowed by two rain delays but never threatened on his way to a 4-under 67 for an eight-shot victory.

It was his eighth victory of the year, making him the first player to win at least eight times in three seasons. Sam Snead, Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan and Arnold Palmer each did that twice. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

GROUP HUG: Manager Frank Robinson is surrounded by the Nationals before the start of the last game of the season, Robinson's last as manager, against the Mets.

Tearful Robinson Says His Goodbye

In manager's farewell, Nationals lose 6-2 to playoff-bound Mets

NATIONALS | Frank Robinson used the phrase "In closing ..." four times, yet kept speaking. Who could blame him?

The Washington Nationals' manager knew that when he relinquished the microphone Sunday, the ceremony in his honor would end, and his final game as a major league skipper would begin.

"I've never done anything harder than I have to do right now," Robinson said, his voice cracking, "and that's to say, 'Goodbye.'"

With that, the Hall of Famer was greeted near home plate by the Mets and then his own players and coaches, for hugs, back slaps and even a little jig. And then, 20 minutes later than scheduled, came the first pitch of what would turn out to be a 6-2 victory for the NL East champion Mets over the last-place Nationals in the regular-season finale.

Earlier, he told reporters: "I'm not going to manage, but I'm not retiring."

After standing with his cap over his chest for the national anthem, Robinson waved to fans and stood on the top step of the dugout to

AROUND THE LEAGUE

A look at what happened on the last day of regular-season ball:

- Houston lost to the Braves 3-1, giving the NL Central to the slumping Cardinals.
- The Tigers lost to the Royals in 12 innings and the Twins won, stealing the AL Central title:
- The Padres held on to win their game and the NL West.
- Derek Jeter went 1-for-5, ending his bid at the AL batting crown, which Twins catcher Joe Mauer won.

autograph balls and jerseys. There were signs thanking Robinson, and chants of "We love Frank!"

"It's a sad day for everybody — not just for him," said catcher Brian Schneider, who's never played for another manager in the majors. During his last pregame news conference in a Nationals uniform, Robinson was asked what his legacy in baseball is. He said he hasn't thought about it.

"I spent 51 years ..." he said, pausing for several seconds to wipe away tears.

Robinson continued: "... doing something that I really like, love and enjoy doing. Not too many people can say that." HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

WILDLIFE WINS: Who wouldn't rather watch animated animals than all-wet rescue swimmers? The cartoon comedy "Open Season" debuted at No. 1 in the weekend's box-office race while the Kevin Costner action flick "The Guardian" ranked second.

Beautiful Machinery

Are robots taking over the world? One author says maybe

BOOKS | Science fiction is slowly becoming science fact, and Timothy N. Hornyak, author of "Loving the Machine: The Art and Science of Japanese Robots," notes that robotic developers speculate that humanoid consumer robots could be available for the mass market by 2020. Hornyak will be, as he says on his blog, preaching the gospel of robots at the Japan-America Society of Washington today at noon.

Where did your interest in robots come from?

I was really hooked on the idea that these robots are like a new emerging life form coming to the fore in Japan and how everyone is so excited over there to start a peaceful co-existence with robots. No robophobia over there.

Why are robots more popular in Japan than in America?

In Japan, they have compelling practical reasons. Their population is starting to fall; the birth-rate is one of the lowest in the world. That means, by 2050, a third of all Japanese are going to be over 50 or 60 years old. ... So where are all these workers going to come from to fill the gap in the work force? They're thinking robots are going to do it.

Are there any popular mass-market robots available now?

We already have Roomba, the iRobot vacuum cleaner robot. It's like a giant hockey puck with a little bit of artificial intelligence. That's great.

Should workers be concerned with robots taking their jobs away?

Some people can be put out of work by robots. In Japan, they say because their unions are generally based in individual corporations, when the robots replace them, that company will take care of the worker and give them another job in the company. We should really try to go beyond the old Western stereotype of either robots killing us or robots stealing our jobs.

Do you have a favorite robot?

I guess my all-time favorite would be Astro Boy. He's a fictional robot created by Osamu Tezuka back in the 1950s. I like him because he's kind of an ideal robot to which all robots can aspire.

On a more serious note: robot, pirate or ninja?

Let me think here. I think the robot would win because the other two just can't do anything to harm the robot. The pirate can take out his cutlass and take a few whacks at the robot, but the robot's just laughing it off because morning stars, cutlasses, what have you — they can do nothing against a sturdy carbon fiber shell and laser beams if he has them. The robot is going to win that one hands down.

Westerberg, Animated

An indie icon finds he has plenty to say to kids — and to bears

MUSIC | Paul Westerberg's fans may unleash a collective groan at the notion of the singer-songwriter scoring an animated family film.

The former leader of indie-rock icons the Replacements has managed to both excite and disappoint his fans during his solo career — and this may bring more of the same.

The former Replacements frontman still speaks for youth — in a way.

"Open Season: Featuring the Songs of Paul Westerberg" (Lost Highway) concerns the adventures of a domesticated grizzly bear and features the voice talents of Martin Lawrence, Ashton Kutcher, Debra Messing and Gary Sinise, among others.

So, how does Westerberg's music fit into all this? As far as the film goes — pretty well. As a worthy addition to his catalog — it does have its moments.

Tracks such as "Meet Me in the Meadow," "All About Me" and "Love You in the Fall" have his trademark catchy hooks, and the playful sing-along lyrics will certainly entertain a family audience without betraying his over-all style.

He can still pull at the heart-strings with his scratchy crooning ("I Belong," "Good Day," "Whisper Me Luck"), and his childlike sense of humor is alive and well on "Right to Arm Bears."

With a family of his own and most Replacements fans at an age where they also have children — he may be exactly where he's aching to be. JOHN KOSIK (AP)

ON THE COUCH: Rapper Ludacris credits daughter Karma for his softened tone.

'Therapy' For Luda

A roughriding rapper tones it down for a (mostly) earnest disc

NEW OUTLOOK | He's pocketed platinum albums as a campy rap character and nabbed Hollywood props in the films "Crash" and "Hustle and Flow." But these days, Ludacris just wants to be himself.

On "Release Therapy," Chris "Ludacris" Bridges peppers his usual raunchy club bangers with introspective, socially conscious tracks. Tackling ghetto strife, prison life, Hurricane Katrina and the struggles of women, Luda feels his latest work represents a 29-year-old man with a daughter and a vision.

"It was a risk to take but I was willing to take it," he said of his new tone.

"Therapy's" first single, however, plays it safe: "Money Maker," featuring Pharrell Williams, is about jiggling body parts and subsequent things to do with them (other album guests include R. Kelly, Young Jeezy, Beanie Sigel, Pimp C and C-Murder).

"Therapy" also delves into Luda's current concerns. On the confessional "Freedom of Preach," Luda asks for forgiveness for hip-hop beefs, struggles with his girlfriend and being rude to his fans.

"My daughter had a lot to do it," said Luda. "I no longer can think for myself anymore. I am thinking for two people, for a generation to come."

Recently, the Ludacris Foundation had its first back-to-school event, providing more than 200 students in his hometown of Atlanta with supplies, shoes, haircuts and health screenings.

"[I] faced that pressure," he said. "Kids making fun of you and stuff because you aren't fortunate, sometimes with the clothes I would wear because they would be cheap. But they can't pick on me anymore."

'UGLY' IS THE NEW HOT: America Ferrera was the belle of the ratings ball last week when the show in which she stars, ABC's "Ugly Betty," outshone the competition. It was the most-watched debut series of this fall's lineup. Work it, girl!

The Sack of Rome

Desperate dames flock to Italy to charm a real royal bachelor

RETURN | The makers of "The Bachelor: Rome" (9 p.m., ABC) have upped the romantic ante and increased the Cinderella factor. The object of desire is Prince Lorenzo Borghese; he may have descended from one of Rome's most illustrious families, but his folks left Italy when he was 2 and raised him as an all-American boy. His Italian vocabulary is limited to menu items.

But this matters little to the 25 "beauties" seeking his attention.

'MIA CARISSIMA!' Prince Lorenzo dazzles a bland, blond American babe.

The introductory party unfolds like a semiformal meat market with a bevy of overripe cheerleaders in low-cut outfits flashing teeth and making awkward small talk. Borghese dispatches more than half of them by the end of the pilot.

There are a few standouts from the bland, blond horde. Lisa charms her prince with a tree-hugging moment that may be a reality TV first. Erica, a "socialite" from Houston, sports a tiara, presumably to keep air from escaping from her head. And one can't help rooting for Gina, the working-class beauty from Chicago.

Watch this for the scenery alone; the winner has about as much of a chance of staying married as Charlie Sheen. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Real Estate

Starting with a Trump home, three listings break nine figures

Donald Trump's property for sale in Palm Beach, Fla., has all the extras one might expect. Marble and 24-karat gold fixtures decorate bathrooms. There's a gargantuan fountain in the driveway and 475 feet of oceanfront out back.

Perhaps the biggest thing about the home, however, is its price tag: $125 million. And that price has already been trumped. A home in Aspen, Colo., is now listed at $135 million. Another home in Lake Tahoe, Nev., was recently listed at a flat $100 million.

These listings represent a milestone in American real estate: the first time U.S. homes have broken nine figures. A May survey of the nation's most expensive homes by Forbes.com said Trump's was the first to break the $100 million mark. At the time, the next-highest listing was $75 million.

"I'm the one that did it, started the trend," said Trump. "I'm surprised that people haven't done it sooner."

Shari Chase, whose company Chase International has the Lake Tahoe listing, acknowledged the shock value of the recent prices.

"This is stratospheric ... but I think we're going in that direction," Chase said. "I think these three properties, they are really the Super Bowl of real estate."

And the listings are extreme. At these prices, bedrooms, bathrooms and square footage are almost irrelevant. The homes, like their price tags, are gigantic.

At the Aspen property, owned by Saudi Prince Bandar, the main residence has more than 56,000 square feet (about 1,000 square feet bigger than the White House). That's OBSCENELY EXPENSIVE: Donald Trump bought his Maison de L'Amitie estate in 2004 for $41 million. His asking price, post-renovation, is a whopping $125 million.

H The $100 Million Home

set on a 95-acre site. Think roughly twice the size of Boston Common. It even has its own car wash and gas pumps.

Need more space? The Lake Tahoe home, owned by Tommy Hilfiger Corp. co-founder Joel Horowitz, comes with 38,000 square feet of livable space on 210 acres. That includes a trout-stocked lake and two par-three golf courses. There's also a grand staircase replicating one on the Titanic.

Smaller in acres but bigger in square footage is Trump's property, called Maison de L'Amitie, which he bought for about $41 million in 2004. He assigned renovations to "Apprentice" winner Kendra Todd. The home's approximately 80,000 square feet are spread over several buildings.

Sara Clemence, an editor for Forbes.com who wrote its listing report, said properties at the top end of the market have been moving upward for years, but the $100 million-plus listings are significant.

"One of the things that surprises me is that all this is happening all at

"I'm not sure if these sellers and Realtors are looking at each other or if they're just coming to the same conclusion all at the same time."

once," Clemence said. "I'm not sure if all these sellers and Realtors are looking at each other or if they're just coming to the same conclusion all at the same time."

The price tags on the homes don't seem to have deterred a small cadre of buyers. The Lake Tahoe property, called "Tranquility," and the Aspen property, called "Hala Ranch," have both already entertained buyers. At these prices it's often the agent who brings the property to a particular buyer's attention, though the agent also gets inquiries.

Joshua Saslove, of Joshua & Co., has the listing there. He's not concerned about the high price. "When the right property hits the right buyer, it all happens very quickly. People who look at properties like this by and large know what they want," he said.

Trump, for his part, was surprised to hear his listing had competition for the top spot in the U.S. "Who's at 135?" he asked.

Sisters Swinging Out

Sports

Women want to play golf, and resorts want to help them

Ashley Brooker seemed oblivious to the silver-haired men teeing up next to her on a humid afternoon. She raised a golf club over her right shoulder, swung and watched the small white ball disappear.

"You have to concentrate. When you think about other things, it can mess up your swing," the 15-year-old said as the ball landed on the driving range at Pinehurst Golf Resort in central North Carolina.

The teenager is part of a surge in female interest in golf in recent years. More and more young women are picking up the sport in high school, where the number of players increased by 1,000 last year.

Though women remain a relatively small part of the golf market, their increasing interest has caught the attention of resorts. A number of them, including Pinehurst, are courting women through gender-specific programs.

Women make up just 18 percent of what the National Golf Foundation defines as "core" golfers — the 12.5 million golfers who play at least eight times a year. The number of occasional female golfers jumped from 2.6 million in 1997 to 4.3 million last year.

In South Carolina, Kiawah Island Golf Resort offers three women's programs, including the two-day, upscale "Pampered Putters," which mixes a round of golf and on-course lessons with spa treatments, champagne and chocolate-covered berries.

At The Boulders in Scottsdale, Ariz. — rated by Golf for Women magazine as the top course for female players — there are golf and spa packages. The Litchfield Beach & Golf Resort, on Pawleys Island, S.C., has a three-day "Girls Love to Golf" program Oct. 12-15.

At Pinehurst, a sprawling 144-hole resort, instructors created a daylong course that aims to get beginners whacking balls before learning the details.

"Sometimes the clinics for new golfers, they just go on forever," said Eric Alpenfels, the resort's director of golf instruction. "The first two weeks you sit in a room and learn about etiquette, regulations and technique. For me, I would be falling on sharp sticks if I could."

Kelly McCall was a top golfer on the University of North Carolina's women's team before her 1997 graduation. Now, she's a lead instructor at Pinehurst. McCall takes students out to the driving range in the morning and provides a few tips on how to stand and hold a golf club, then says, "Hit the ball."

When Barbara Thompson took the class in June, she was taken aback at the idea of going right out onto the course. "I think for most of us it was very intimidating, but making us go out and play really proved to us it was something we could do."

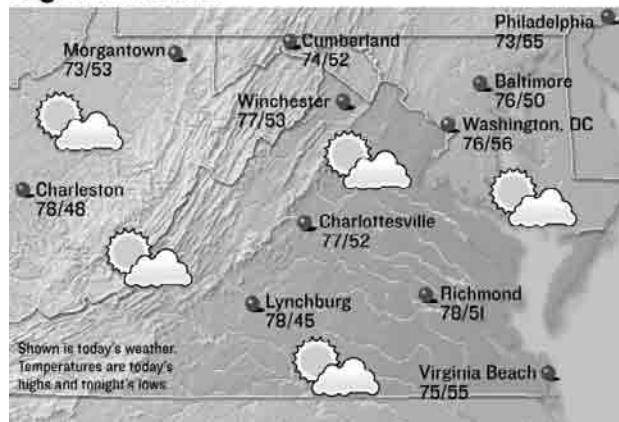

The Raleigh resident became interested in the game when she visited Pinehurst for business last year during the men's U.S. Open. Now, she plays at least once a week. "I know that golf is a great networking tool," she said. "I wanted to meet other women and get the chance to network, but it's also fun."

Marni, Moschino & More

Fashion Week in Italy brings fun, color for spring

Consuelo Castiglioni, the woman behind the Marni label, plopped stovepipe hats on her expressionless models to underline her new fashion aesthetic.

The no-fuss summer collection marked a change for the designer, who's known for her bucolic visions and folksy styles. Instead, monochrome, shell-shaped tunics, worn with high heels and leggings, spoke of minimalist city chic.

Also showing Tuesday in Milan was Etro, known for its Bohemian style, and Moschino, known for poking good fun at whatever is currently hot on the catwalk.

Designer Veronica, the youngest member of the Etro family, held up the family colors with beat generation prints and tinkling hippy jewelry, but brought the label forward toward her "trip into the future" with mini sack dresses and neat little coats and jackets. The Etro ethnic-print chiffon evening gowns with satin shoulder straps are sure to be a hit.

There is definitely a 1960s (or is it 1940s?) feel to this round of preview showings, which Moschino took to town in fluffy baby doll dresses as well as proper little suits, and prim basic black and pearl cocktail dresses. The turban, of course, was part of the Moschino fashion roast.

On Wednesday, the accent was more on the feet than on the head, with the introduction of a super sexy flat by Frida Giannini for Gucci. Far from their frequent association with androgynous style, these low-heeled pumps and booties buckled at the ankle and are sure to be a hot and much-copied item next summer.

Wide belts buckled above the waist and the new bow handle for bags, inspired by a vintage steering wheel, were other winners by the 35-year-old Gucci designer who started out in the accessory department and last year became creative designer for the Florentine fashion house.

The overall feel of the new collection was 1960s with an A-line silhouette, and a myriad of short styles. Generous sleeves enrich the look. The Gucci palette is based on black with red and purple detail, or bright disco silver.

Nighttime glamour comes in flounced baby doll dresses in demure chiffon, or slinky black gowns with striking metal straps.

Gucci treated the fashion crowd to an after-show party of chocolate and champagne with a live performance by John Legend, to mark the 85th anniversary of the brand.

The event also marks the launching of a book, "Gucci by Gucci," which traces the history of the house and will be available in Gucci boutiques later this year. DANIELA PETROFF (AP)

Olive Skin Is In

"For centuries, olives have played an important role in health, peace-making and ... skincare," announces the press release for Palmer's OLIVE BUTTER line. And truly, when has Retin-A done zip for global harmony? These morally superior products use extra-virgin olive oil as their gimmick, though olive oil is not mint-green and does not smell like Zest soap. The shea-buttery body balm ($6.10, drugstores and etbrowne.com) soothed tortured, hideous elbows; the lotion ($4.65-$6.10) is light and soothing. The concentrated cream ($2.50-$4.15) left a greasy residue, however, and the soap ($2.60) was just plain old soap. HOLLY J. MORRIS (EXPRESS)

So Many Proposed Stations

GREEN LINE | Someday, you'll be able to take Metrorail between Dulles International and Reagan National airports. And then — who knows? — maybe you could ride Metrorail to Baltimore-Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport. As Maryland politicians talk about the so-called Purple Line — a light-rail route that'd link the Bethesda, Silver Spring and New Carrollton stations — a proposal to extend the Green Line to BWI has been gaining momentum and has been called a more critical transportation priority because of the tens of thousands of Defense Department-related jobs — and residents — set to move to Fort Meade.

So just as you're getting used to hearing about new stations on the proposed Dulles extension like Tysons Central 7, Tysons Central 123, Tysons East and Tysons West (Aren't they all beautiful names?), might you start hearing about new proposed Green Line stations like NSA-Fort Meade and someplace called Konterra Town Center?

In the near term, you probably won't hear much more about the plan than what's already been said. With the November elections placing the Purple Line — which runs through voter-rich territory — at the forefront of the state's transportation debate, Purple trumps Green. And don't forget that Maryland still has to figure out how to pay its part of the $1.5 billion Metro BAND OF BROTHERS: Maybe Michael Stipe celebrated his name day Friday.

funding pact legislation sponsored by Virginia Rep. Tom Davis. MICHAEL GRASS (EXPRESS)

Is Your Name Skaidris?

NAME GAME | If your name is Michael, you should have had your friends buy you drinks on Friday. Same for all the Ivonnas out there, because Sept. 29 was Michael's Day and Ivonna's Day. The concept of feast days — on which the patron saint you may be named after is celebrated — is familiar to Catholics. This tradition carries over to various European nations where the religious significance doesn't really play that strong of a role.

Take the Latvians, for instance, who have expanded the tradition by adding multiple names to each day of the year, whether there's a saint to celebrate or not. Today, if your name happens to be Ilma, Reinholds or Skaidris, it's your day to celebrate. Latvian names don't always match up with English equivalents, but you may find one on the Latvian names day calendar at DAILY-TANGENTS.COM/CALENDARS. M.G.

Fall Television

Washington Post television columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday at washingtonpost.com to discuss “Grey's Anatomy,” “Ugly Betty” and James Woods' hair on “Shark.”

What do you think of “Grey's Anatomy” so far? Will Meredith ever pick her man or will this become a Ross/Rachel type thing?

Gak! — I'm afraid you may be right, though I suspect Meredith will, in one of those incredible coincidences that make covering TV so exciting, make her choice during the November sweeps.

“Ugly Betty” was awfully fun to watch and I'll definitely tune in again. But I'm having trouble suspending my disbelief that anyone in this age of cheap, cute clothes readily available at Target, Old Navy, etc., would dress as terribly as poor Betty.

You clearly have not met some of my relatives. Oh, my God — did I just say that out loud?

Have you caught “The Megan Mullally Show” yet? It's got to be the biggest train wreck since Chevy Chase had a talk show.

Unlike Chase, Mullally is enormously talented. I get why Chase tried to do a late night talk show. Of course, he was surprised when he found out it actually involved some work. Why does someone as talented as Mullally do a daytime talk show? Does she really need the money?

“Brothers and Sisters.” What did you think of it?

I cannot get past Ally McBeal as a conservative talk show host. Totally unbelievable.

What are your feelings on “Shark?”

The dialogue is a bit too sharp, pointed and fast-paced. It gives it an artificial, contrived feeling. Not a fan of the father-daughter subplot either. Wish Jeremy Northam had accepted the role. (Sigh) Wish James Woods would stop dying his hair camels-hair brown. And they have to stop dressing him in jeans and leather jackets if he's going to have camels-hair brown hair. It just looks way too sad-old-man.

THIS
GIVE
FOR MY LIFE!

R. Donald Tomasik

I wanted to write and let you know that I am eternally grateful to you for saving my life! I saw an ad for mobile ultra-sound tests for a year before actually signing up to be tested. I just had a feeling that something wasn't right; my wife kept urging me to spend the $179 and get checked for nothing else but the peace of mind.

Boy, am I glad I did, it was found that I had a 5 1/2 centimeter aortic aneurysm. I was able to take my test results to my primary care physician and be referred to a specialist, Doctor Showalter, who's first question was 'how do you know you have an aneurysm?' I showed him my HealthFair test results and he smiled and said, 'those HealthFair screenings probably saved your life!'

That was in February 2003 and after a successful surgery, I'm happy to say I'm in good health in 2004 and indebted to HealthFair USA for saving my life! Unfortunately our friend Connie in Vermont didn't have an opportunity to have these inexpensive tests and died of a ruptured aneurysm. We miss her and hope to see HealthFair mobile units all over the country someday. It really is necessary to have these tests since Medicare won't pay for preventative screenings and I couldn't afford to pay the hospital price! Thanks from both Marge and I for your 7 test package, it was truly an investment in my health!

JCAHO

What this means for you.

Accreditation by JCAHO is considered the Gold Standard in health care. JCAHO is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to raising the level of safety and quality of care in all health care settings. Since 1951, JCAHO accreditation has been recognized within health care as a symbol of quality. HealthFair USA is accredited just as the hospitals in your community are accredited.

Accreditation means that HealthFair USA has volunteered to undergo a challenging, comprehensive evaluation. HealthFair USA has made a significant extra effort to review and improve the key factors that can affect the quality and safety of your care. Doctors and nurses from JCAHO personally visited HealthFair USA to conduct an intense on-site review and looked at how well the company: 1) provides a safe environment of care, 2) protects your rights as a client, including your right to confidentiality, 3) educates you about the risks and options for diagnosis and treatment, 4) protects you against infection, and 5) plans for emergency situations.

HealthFair USA is the only mobile diagnostic screening company with JCAHO accreditation, showing a willingness to be measured against the highest standards of performance.

Whenever and wherever you receive health care, look for the JCAHO gold seal of approval.
